NEOLIBERALISM // READING // 2016

“It isn’t that I set out on economic policies; it’s that I set out really to change the approach, and changing the economics is the means of changing that approach. If you change the approach you really are after the heart and soul of the nation. Economics are the method; the object is to change the heart and soul.”
— Margaret Thatcher

“our efforts must be directed towards cracking open those spaces of possibility that do exist and fostering better political conditions over time. We must first reach a space within which more radical demands can be meaningfully articulated, and must therefore prepare for the long term if we wish to alter the terrain of politics substantially.”
— Nick Srnicek & Alex Williams

Why does the world look like it does? What are the root causes of this? What are some of the relationships between systems of oppression, economics and in particular neoliberalism in all of this? How did this system get built and what are some of the forces required to change a political and economic system? Most importantly what are the lessons this holds for all of us trying to make change today?

Please note that this reading list is usually accompanied by training session(s) but we thought it would be useful to provide it for those wanting to do their own reading.

This reading list is the end result of a lot collective thinking and practice. NEON led the synthesis of these insights to create the reading list, with the support of the Public Interest Research Centre (PIRC). PIRC designed the reading list and made it beautiful.
